Dear parishioners,

Praying the Mass Anew The New Translation of The Roman Missal and Our Actual Participation at Mass

Praying According to the Words Requires Listening Well

In preparing for the new translation of The Roman Missal, we will necessarily focus on the words themselves. However, our preparation for the new versions of the prayers would not be complete unless we consider how we are to prayerfully listen.

Surely in our own human relationships, we all know that listening is not always the same as hearing, and that not listening well has consequences – ask any parent if you need proof of this point. In the liturgy, a key element in our active participation is the capacity not simply to hear, but to truly listen to all that is to be heard, whether spoken, sung, or made by sounds of musical instruments, bells, etc. Though many parishes have hymnals or missalettes that contain written versions of most, if not almost every word of prayer, such written resources can not claim to convey the full value of the sung or spoken sound meant to be heard by listening. How important is it that we listen well? How can good listening lead us to a deeper encounter with God?

One of the most useful ways to consider listening at Mass is to consider the Mass itself as a dialogue. In this dialogue, those who are speaking include God himself (especially in the Gospel), the priest, other ministers, and the people in the congregation. We can even identify how each individual recipient of Holy Communion contributes words. The spoken words may be directed toward God, to one particular person, to a particular set of people, etc. As our words are meant to communicate with others, it is essential that the intended audience of the words is not only able to hear them, but is ready to take in their full meaning by listening well. Here is an example:

At the very beginning of Mass, the Sign of the Cross (both in words and as a gesture) initiate the Mass as an act of prayer offered unto God himself. The greeting of the people by the priest is meant directly for the people, who, having listened to the words of greeting, give the fitting response to the priest (this very dialogue will be covered in some detail in a later article). The greeting is followed by the invitation to “acknowledge our sins” so that we are ready to celebrate the sacred mysteries of the Eucharistic sacrifice. The tone of these words, meant as they are for the whole congregation (including the ordained minister/s), serves more as a directive to act than as a prayer in itself. Conscious listening to these words will effect whether or not each person acts accordingly – by silently calling to mind any sins that they may have recently committed. The prayer that follows (“The Confiteor” [“I confess to almighty God...”], or the invocations followed by the words “Lord, have mercy”) are spoken unto God himself, mindful of how each individual says the words, as members of the one body, the Church, in public worship. Through our proper listening to all of the words that lead to this moment of prayer, we are made ready to pray the words with their proper intention. When there is a failure to listen, the intent of the words risk being lost all together, or being less than what their full value invites. Hence, it is by way of listening that we are able to actively participate in this prayer (and any prayer or response at Mass) to their fullest degree. Listening well can (and does) lead us to encounter God more fully and consciously in the Mass.

As we continue to prepare for praying the Mass anew with the new translation, we can already begin and continue to practice listening, properly focusing our attention on every spoken word in listening and in responding to each word in the most fitting manner. By our ability to listen well, our participation in the Mass, especially through the new prayers, can be raised to a higher level, opening ourselves to a deeper, more meaningful encounter with Jesus Christ.

Faith First for Families

Sunday Gospel Reflections for October 30, 2011

Matthew - 23:1-12

Gospel Summary - Some, not all, of the Jewish leaders wanted people to recognize them for the high position they held. They wanted to sit in the best seats at banquets and in the synagogues. They wanted people to make a fuss over them when they met, so they were certain to wear clothing and items that would distinguish their high position. Jesus assured these leaders that the only way they would truly be exalted would be to be humbled.

Reflection for Families - Few people can humble us as quickly as our children. They might embarrass us by their public behavior, or they might make a reference to our age or choice in clothing style. What will our response tell them about us? When we try to maintain our position of authority over them, we are likely to heighten the confrontation. We know from experience that we gain little ground. Often humor is the best antidote. It may require some wit on our part to respond lightly to their criticism or public behavior, but usually another time will present itself to share with them how we were really feeling at the moment. Their respect for us develops as they continue to see us model appropriate responses without using our weapons of power and authority.

Bringing the Gospel into your Family - Some support and recovery groups suggest that we try to do an act of kindness each day for someone and not let anyone know we did the act. This is a way of acting humbly when we serve another anonymously. Try to think of a family of someone who might benefit from an action on your part. Plan a way of doing it so that no one knows you were responsible. Pay attention to opportunities in the future and perform “Random acts of kindness” as often as possible.
